

Scot McKay (00:00.27)

You're listening to Snippets From The Summit with your host, Scot McKay.

All right, how's it going, gentlemen? This is your main man Scot McKay coming at you again with another Snippet From The Summit as part of The Mountain Top Podcast from X & Y Communications. Today we're gonna talk about, well, getting your hair cut. Now, here's the deal: you can't just DoorDash a haircut. You can't order one from Amazon. So, guess what, gentlemen? You're gonna have to get out of the house and go find a barber shop and get your hair cut.

Preferably by a real human being while you still can. I mean, this is probably something robots are gonna be doing sooner than later, but unless you own a flobe, which I hope you do not, for the sake of your style and your ability to attract women, you're gonna have to go to the barber shop. And here's what I think. Gentlemen, you should get a female barber. Now, I wanna be upfront here. I have utmost respect for barbershop culture, especially in the African American community.

I know it rocks. I know it's very cool. I'm frankly a little bit jealous. And the times I've gone to barbershops where everyone's hanging out and shooting the breeze, yeah, I really enjoyed it. But for those of you living in suburbia and going to normal pedestrian chain barbershops, you know the ones like supercuts and headhunters and all those other ones you find in strip malls. Well, you know what? Get a woman to cut your hair. Now

The obvious reason would be because a woman would know how to make a man look good and attractive to women. Yeah, okay, I'll buy that. That's a good point already. But the real reason why you should have a female barber is because you're gonna spend at least ten minutes, probably more like twenty or thirty, in a chair with a woman to talk to who's willing to talk to you and who you can absolutely positively practice with. Now

Scot McKay (01:59.21)

Almost every female barber, if she's got any experience at all, has some experience being social. You know, if you've ever seen The Sopranos, one of the funniest cracks in the entire series is when Uncle June says, Y'all yap more than six barbers. Well, yeah, I think he was referring specifically to six female barbers in particular, because female barbers will talk your ear off as long as you wait for it, lead.

Now, gentlemen, warm levity is the key. Talk to her about her. Keep the conversation light. Don't go into stoic, angry guy duck face mode with her or anything. Besides, that can interfere with your haircut if you're making too many facial expressions. Let her do her work, but have a fun, light conversation with her. Gentlemen, this is the best practice you're gonna get that entire day. Just like when you go out to eat and you talk to the waitresses, you know, that's great.

Practice in and of itself. But you know what? The waitress isn't going to be there the whole time serving you. She's got to go around to other tables, go get you your stuff, bring it back, etc. etc. The barber, that female barber, is gonna be standing beside you the whole time. And guess what, guys? If you prefer a more attractive, hotter, sexier barber, then most barber shops let you make an appointment with a particular hairstylist by name. Choose your gal.

And then talk to her. And you know what? The next time you come in, unless you have like this super complicated soy boy haircut that requires more than clippers and a quick trim, then mix it up. Get another chick to cut your hair. Gentlemen, this is the best practice you probably haven't thought of yet. Get a female barber. And two side notes here. First of all, if you're not getting a haircut regularly, you should get one about every three weeks to.

A month max just to make sure your wig is adjusted in a way that's absolutely making you look the best you possibly can. Second of all, if you live here in Texas, find a barber shop that gives you free beer.

That and talking to a woman for 25 or 30 minutes, you just can't beat that setup. If you want to talk about this or anything else, scot@mountaintoppodcast.com. Be good out there. As always.

Scot McKay (04:20.066)
visit mountaintoppodcast.com for more.