How's it going, gentlemen, this is Scot McKay coming at you again with another snippet from the summit as part of The Mountain Top Podcast. Today, I want to talk to you about your success with women and give you a very key metric so that you can know when well, for lack of a better word, you're truly succeeding with women. Because you know, we can play tricks on ourselves, we can compare ourselves against other dudes. Okay, this guy is seeing this girlfriend this guy has 610 Girlfriends he's seeing when do you know that you have really arrived when it comes to this area of success with women? Well, I want to take you back to a radio show that used to well I guess play mostly on am stations until just about five or six years ago when the host retired, the host who is very much alive by the way, and from time to time posts on platforms like x and you know other blogs is named Bob Brinker. And Bob breaker is a financial advisor and of course ran this radio show for years. Like most presenters on radio, television or even podcasts such as this, you know, we tend to have our soap boxes we tend to have those phrases which we coin that we come back to freely so, like I talked about the Big Four quite often. Bob Brinker often talked about this idea he called critical mass. In Bob breakers vernacular critical mass was that point where you achieved financial freedom you had enough of a stockpile of assets as it were be at stock cash, in a real estate, whatever value you had your net worth. And indeed your ability to be liquid with it allowed you to create a point where you weren't dependent on having to raise any more funds to live the life you want it to you could, for lack of a better way to put it live off the interest. Others would call this similar state financial freedom. Well, what's the equivalent of financial freedom when it comes to dating and relating to women? Where is this critical mass and how and when does it happen? Well, the way I see it, you can start with a concept I coined years ago called to Bonanzas. I personally believe most of us as men have, unfortunately, if we're honest with ourselves, never really been with the kind of women we've wanted the most. For us. That seems a faraway concept, perhaps too good to be true, something that happens to other guys. And by the way, if you've grown up poor your whole life, the idea of even making 100 grand a year, let alone reaching what Bob Brinker called Critical Mass seems too good to be true also, doesn't it? So these concepts are indeed similar. But this idea I'm talking about of two Bonanzas happens when not only have we met Finally, one woman who likes us back in return is attracted to us as we're attracted to her who's exactly the kind of woman we've wanted the most. But now we've met a second one. We have two women in our lives, we can choose which one we want to go out with. We have both of them adoring us, and perhaps wanting to have sex with us, you know, maybe even marry us, right? Well, why is that second Bonanza so significant? Because it means the first one wasn't a fluke. It wasn't some sort of happy accident that a woman ended up with you. When you have a second one. When you have that second bonanza of a woman in your life, it's a lot easier to believe women in general, are going to find you attractive, perhaps more often than not so yes, your confidence improves, your self esteem improves because yes, you know what, how we think of ourselves and how others view us is very much tied to our success with women. After all, we're humanoids. And that's the way we're wired. Some people would like to be macho and pretend that isn't the case. I'm much more pragmatic and realistic about that. I do think that men who are successful with women feel better about themselves and other people respect them more for it. So what happens is, when you have to Bonanzas, you can freely talk to another woman or more freely talk to another woman without what's commonly known as approach anxiety consuming you right? And if on the off chance, as I'm going to go ahead and presume it that she doesn't like you or doesn't want any of you or even is in some way unavailable, you'll find it much easier to brush that situation off. After all, you already have two women in your life who you find very attractive, who adore you also in return, it's reciprocated. But in reality once you have those two banana As as and you have the confidence to go along with it, you're going to find it not only do you have greater facility in meeting other women, but you're going to have much greater ability to get them to want you in return. The next thing you know, you have three Bonanzas for Bonanzas five finances. Six Bonanzas? It sounds kind of like a warped version of an old kid song doesn't it? Right. But for sure, you end up with a group of women who want you who you really are attracted to. And you have too many of them, you become a chooser, you start putting women in the just the friendzone, as you raise the bar, and you can look around you and say to yourself, you know what, the women Adore Me, I'm attractive to women. And then the tsunami of success only grows from there because as I've always said, the number one differentiator between men who get women and men who don't, is men who get women believe they should be getting women. So you know, I'm going to leave this an open question, insofar as what's defining the actual point of critical mass here. Is it the number of women who are absolutely your type, the kind of women you've always dreamed of who you have available to you? Or is it rather that point where you believe finally once and for all, you're good enough attractive enough, man enough to attract the kind of women you want? You know what? Here's my hunch. For my money, I believe the ladder is where you achieve this dating and relationship equivalent to Bob Brinker, his concept of critical mass and the best part of all, that is all under your control gentleman.
